It is entirely appropriate for Supreme Court Justices to have desks and computers for home offices due to their heavy caseload and the amount of time they spend working at home. Justices do not work 9-5 jobs and frequently deal with emergency matters during the evening and also when Court is not in session. Nevertheless, the desk has been taken to storage until it is needed in another Supreme Court office. The desk was not returned because its use was inappropriate, but because issues such as this are becoming an obstacle to the Court completing its important work.
